All along the Kohala coast the water was running in torrents and the coast was a line of waterfalls. From Niihau to Kawalhae there was a perfect deluge of rain and a very high wind. From the latter port Captain Parker started for Maui. At Makena the mail was taken off, but no forther communication was had. At Kihel no stop was made nor at Maalnes bay nor Labaina, where the seas were rolling in at a rate that meant danger to may boat that might attenue to get to the landing.

Fought With an Ulua

Captain Sam Mana of the Concord has distinguished himself twice of late. He has taken to himself another wife to share wall, his sorrows and double his expenses, and has had a most thrilling fight with a monster ulmi-

Captain Sam, as he is familiarly known. is an Hawaiian, and one of the oldest and most experienced schooner captains on the const, laving been at it, man and boy, for fifty years.

Just before sailing yesterday Captain Sam was being congratulated upon his reover the event as other men would be. He seemed to be anxious to have the congratulations over with, and apparently had something to tell.

He said "Getting married is all right. I'm pretty old now and have been married plenty times. I had a big fight the other day with a big fish. Pretty near got the best of me."

Then the old man went on to tell how he had booked an immense ulua and how the fish fought. In the struggle the captain was pulled overboard and the weight of his and the fish's body broke the line from where it was made fast. Nothing daunted, Sam held on to the line and tried to work up to the fish. Although he is old in years, Captain Sam is sprightly and a match for many of his juniors as a swimmer. He and the fish had it, nip and tuck, for about half and hour, and Captain Sam was getting decidedly the better of the argument. when in some way the ulua snapped the book which held him and was out of Captain Sam says he was sorry to lose his prize, but thinks it was a good fight and much more praisworthy than getting married again.

The Race Started.

The S. G. Wilder and the Martha Davis started on their race to San Francisco yesterday morning early. They left within a couple of hours of each other in tow of the Fearless. They were both given good starts and were taken off shore six or seven miles before being let go. Both ressels went by way of Koko

At about 1:30 yesterday Charley Peterson, the lookour at Diamond Head reported both vessels rolling along with a fair wind past Keko Head, both vessels having made the point without a tack. The Wilder, when last seen, appeared to be slightly in the lead,

As the vessels left the harbor there were little knots of people along the wharves who yelled a good-bye and good luck to each of the departing skippers. Many of the vessels in the harbor dipped salutes with their flags, and the start of the race was made quite an event. Both captains, McAlman and Jackson, have lasts of friends here and considerable discussion was indulged in along the front as to the outcome of the race. There are some who think the Wilder has a lead-pipe cinch, but others who have . mown the Martha Davis for years pin their faith on her ability to deliver the goods in San Francisco first.

Rob Roy Held.

As predicted several weeks ago, the tiny schooner Rob Roy and her Japanese captain have come into contact with the American navigation laws. Yesterday the little boat was almost ready for sea and a custom house man went to her to notify the Jap captain that the collector wanted to see him. Under her American register it is illegal for any but an American to command her, and so the Jap who has chartered her from her owner, J. Wilson, will have to get an American citizen for skipper before the little craft can go to

The Rob Roy is an old boat, having been built here in 1803. She is next to the smallest schooner having American register here. Her tonnage is 17.32, The Eureka in ballast. Mille Morris the smallest schooner, registers 13.45 tons.

The schooner Fannie Adele, with a load of coal, left for Kanai yesterday. The vessel is now in first-class condition and it is thought that she will be a better sailer now that her centerboard has been emoved and her keel deepened. Passenger rates on the Fannie Adele have been changed. Passengers are now charged by the day for the trip. It was found necessary to do this on account of her previous performances to and from Kanai.
